

I'm sure that whoever is supporting this ivory ban bill has good intentions, but it is extremely unwise. Hundreds of people whom I know could have their homes invaded and be jailed for having their musical instruments, scientific instruments, and other things which have old and incidental ivory parts.

Saving elephants is good. Threatening and punishing innocent people is bad.

Please be a leader in repudiating such nonsense and instead foster understanding and ways of punishing the people who are killing elephants and trading in tusks.

This bill is bad, bad legislation and, if enacted, will very likely lead to all sorts of serious, unintended consequences and, in the end, will have to be repealed to halt those consequences.

Thank you for taking this issue seriously.
